

Executive Summary

This is a study on factory garments worker's productivity score.

Why

This case study is to find out what attributes or factors influencing productivity.

Who

The results presented are for public general talks.

What

This dataset includes important attributes of the garment manufacturing process and the productivity of the employees which had been collected manually and also been validated by the industry experts.

How

There will be simple explanations and suitable graphs for audience to understand.

Challenges

Productivity can be very subjective and there may be questions raised on the data.